SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

An Unusually Successful Career-High Rank as Lawyer, Soldier and States-

Rutherford Birchard Hayes was born in Delaware, O., October 4, 1822, and was therefore a little past seventy years of age at the time of his death. His ancestry was Scotch on his father's side, the line of descent being traced back to George Hayes, who came to Windsor, Conn., from Scotland, in 1882. Daniel Hayes, the son of this Scotch settler, was once ransomed by the Connecticut colony after being cantured by the French and Indians. Ezekiel Hayes, a son of Daniel, won military distinction in the defense of the colony, Rutherford Hayes, the grandiather of the nineteenth President of the United States, was born in Now Haven in 1750. He became an officer in the service of the state of New York during the Revolution, and after the war, he settled in Vermont. The second Rutherford Hayes was born at Bratileboro in 1787. He married Sophia Birchard, a most estimable woman, whose family was of English descent, and they moved to Delaware, O., in 1817. There the husband and father died in 1822, the year of the birth of the great and honored son to whom he left his name and sturdy character.

The young widow to whom the bringing up of Rutherford Birchard Hayes was thus solely entrusted from the beginning was a woman of noble mind and heart. She lived until 1866, when her son had already become a majorgeneral and a member of Congress. This devoted and enlightened mother gave the future President the best of intellectual training from early boyhood. He studied for a time under Judge Finch, a former tutor in Yale, and completed his training for college at Middletown. Conn., under Isaac Webb, a Yale graduate. At Middletown he won a first brise in Latin and Greek. Returning to his native state he entered Kenyon college, at Gambler, O., at the age of sixteen. He graduated four years later at the head of his class. The young valodictorian of Kenyon, after studying law for a short time at Columbus, went to Harvard, in 1843, and graduated in 1845 from the law school of that university. ancestry was Scotch on his father's side, the line of descent being traced

ADMITTED TO THE BAR.

He again returned to Ohio, and after being admitted to the bar settled in Fremont, where he began the practice of his profession. Mr. Hayes soon moved to Cincinnati, and there became of his profession. Mr. Hayes soon moved to Cincinnati, and there became a very successful attorney, soon being elected city solicitor, and serving with marked ability for three years in that capacity. On the fall of Fort Sumter he abandoned his profitable practice and his home, and at the age of thirty-eight commenced with all the enthusiasm of early youth the work of raising troops. On June 7, 1861, Governor Dennison issued to Butherford B. Hayes a commission as major of the Twenty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Five months of service in West Virginia made him colonel. At South Mountain he fought with the utmost bravery and fearlessness, and on that bloody field he received a wound which left one of his arms weak for life. Following this engagement he was made colonel of the Twenty-third Ohio, the regiment in which his military career begun.

WOULDN'T LEAVE THE FIELD.

As colonel his commands in the field were usually brigades, or even divisions, were usually brigades, or even divisions, and he rendered important service at Cloyd Mountain, Winchester, Berryville, Opequan, Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek. On the last named field General Hayes received a brigadier's commission for conspicuous gallantry and merit, Sheridan making the recommendation. August 6, 1864, while in the field, he was nominated for Congress, but he refused to leave the army to work for his electiou. On August 24, General Hayes wrote from camp to William Henry Smith, "Your suggestion about getting a turlough to take the atump was certainly made without reflection. An officer fit for duty who at this crisis would abandon his post to electioneer for a scat in Congress ought to be scalped. You may feel perfectly sure I shall do no such thing." He was elected, nevertheless, by a majority of 2,455 in the Second Ohio district, then, as now, a part of Hamilton county. Meanwhile his army record was growing larger and more brilliant. Before General Hayes was brevetted a major general, March 12, 1885, "for gallant and distinguished services," he had been wounded four times, and for a hundrod days he was exposed in battles and skirmishes to death on the field.

In Congress the brave and succossful soldier soon made himself felt, and in and he rendered important service at skirmishes to death on the field.

In Congress the brave and successful soldier soon made himself felt, and in 1866 he was renominated by the Republicans of his district, by acclamation, and returned to the Fortieth Congress by 2,556 majority. As chairman of the library committee he took a leading part in the enactment of measures which greatly increased the usofulness of the library of Congress, and he was particularly active in guarding and advancing the interests of the Union soldiers who had served under him. He was a staunch Republican throughout on questions concerning reconstrucout on questions concerning reconstruc-tion and the impeachment of President

GOVERNOR OF OHIO.

After serving three years in the house of representatives, General Hayes was elected governor of Ohio, de-Hayes was elected governor of Ohio, defeating Allen G. Thurman by 2,933 plurality. He resigned his seat in Congress and was inaugurated governor January 13, 1868. He filled this place as he had all other positions of power and responsibility, with success and high credit to himself, and he was renominated in 1869 by acclamation. A spirited campaign, largely devoted to the greenback question, was followed by the defeat of Hon. George H. Pendleton, the Democratic candidate, by 7,503 votes. Governor Hayes was inaugurated for his second term January 10, 1870. During his service as governor homes were established for the orphans of soldiers; the powers of the state board of charities were enlarged, the agricultural and machanical college of the state university was founded, minority representation on election boards was established, the state debt was reduced, and the fifteenth amendment to the constitution was ratified by Ohio. In July, 1872, Governor Hayes was again nominated, against his will, for Congress in the Second district. It was a Democratic year in Cincinnati and Hamilton county, and he was defeated by General H. B. Banning, although he ran a thousand votes a head of his ticket. The same year General Hayes declined an offer of the position of assistant treasurer of the United States at Cincinnati.

THE BILL ALLEN CAMPAION. feating Allen G. Thurman by 2,983 plur-

THE BILL ALLEN CAMPAIGN.

The summer of 1875 found the condition of the Republican party a critical one in Ohio and in the country at large. The panic of 1873 had been followed in 1874 by sweeping Democratic victories. Samuel J. Tilden had been elected gov-ernor of New York by a very large ma-jerity. William Allen was governor of Ohio and had been renominated by ac-clamation. Hard times had given a great impetus to the greenback inflattion movement, and as Ohio then voted in October the issue between sound money and financial heresy was to be decided, in large measure, by the result of the election in that state. The Republicans turned to deneral Hayes as their strongest candidate, and on June 2 he was nominated for governor for the third time. The campaign was very spirited and attracted wide, attention, victory resting with the party of sound finance, by a plurality of 5,541.

NOMINATED FOR PRESIDENT. This great triumph gave Hayes wide fame and prestige, and when the Republican national convention met at Cincinnati June 14, 1875, he was the candidate of the Ohio delegation and received sixty-one votes for President on the first ballot. Nearly half of all the delegates were for James G. Blaine, and Olivor P. Morton. Benjamin H. Bristow and Roscoe Conkling divided most of the remainder. General Hayes gradually gained strength and on the seventh ballot the opposition to Blaine was concentrated on Ohio's strong and popular governor, and he was nominated by 384 votes to 341 for his great competitor and 21 scattering. The contest terminated June 16. On July 8 Governor Hayes issued his formal letter of acceptance of the nomination, and the admirable manner in which he stated fame and prestige, and when the Reacceptance of the nomination, and the admirable manner in which he stated his position in favor of the resumption of specie payments, the merit standard for office, the sacred observance of the constitution and all its amendments, the pacification of the south and non-sectarian schools did much to aid the Republican cause. The campaign was hard fought, and it ended, as is well known, in a close and disputed election.

THE DISPUTED ELECTORAL COUNT. In the southern states of South Carolina, Louisiana and Florida two sets of electors were chosen, and much excitement prevailed. President Hayes maintained a cain and dignified attitude throughout, the contention ending in the creation of the electoral commisthroughout, the contention ending in the creation of the electoral commission, consisting of five senators, three of whom were Republicans and two Democrats, five representatives, three being Democrats and two Republicans, and five justices of the supreme court. It is not necessary to recount here how the commission by a vôte of 8 to 7 decided the Hayes and Wheeler electors lawfully chosen in every one of the disputed states. This gave Hayes 185 electoral votes and Tilden 184. The counting of the vote was finished March 2, 1877, and on Monday, March 5, General Hayes was publicly inaugurated. Had taken the eath of office in private on March 4 as a precaution. The term of President Hayes was a stormy one. It witnessed the restoration of specie payments and a great revival of business and prosperity. The reform of the civil service was begun. A policy of pacification and conciliation—was adopted toward the south. Troops were withdrawn from the capits, of South ed toward the south. Troops were withdrawn from the capita; of South Carolina and Louisiana, with the result of turning both state governments over to the Democracy. SUCCESSFUL ADMINISTRATION.

President Hayes was antagonized by not a few powerful leaders of his own party, notably Senator Conkling and his friends in the senate, and his course in sacrificing much for the sake of re-sacrificing much for the sake of reestablishing local self-government in the south was bitterly attacked in certain quarters. However his administration was clean, broad and successful. His much loved and honored wife, Lucy Webb Hayes, whom he married in 1852, was a woman of strong Christian beliefs, and her management of the domesticalfairs of the white house won the warn admiration of the friends of temperance and avangelical religion everywhere. The closs of the presidential term of Rutherford B. Hayes left his party strong and victorious, his country prosperous and better governed than aver before and his fame secure in the honor and admiration of the best and truest of his fellow citizens.

He returned to his home in Fremont, and there he lived until the sudden terministics of his server in dignified are-

and there he lived until the sudden termination of his career, in dignified and useful retirement. His years of private life were filled with good works. He was active in philanthropy, including prison reform, the amelioration of the condition of the Indians, and the aiding of near a progress. The neighbors of condition of the Indians, and the aiding of negro progress. The neighbors of Rutherford B. Hares knew him best and loved him most. They saw his simple, generous, kindly and public-spirited home life, and recognized in his course the true path for men who have held the greatest of earthly offices. His vigor and health were remarkable, and his activity tireless, and he was stricken down at last in the midst of a beneficent, honored and honorable career of unobtrusive usefulness.
